

Today we are launching our new name.

After 16 years facilitating pro bono legal services as QPILCH, we are adopting a new name:

LawRight.

The name says it all

- As LawRight, we will continue to advocate for access to legal services, seeking justice for people who cannot otherwise obtain the right legal help
- We will direct our services and resources at solving the needs of the most vulnerable in a sensitive, effective and efficient manner
- We will connect our clients with the right form of legal representation, to fulfil our promise of being “a voice for those without”.

What this means

- As the need for pro bono legal services is increasing, we are invigorating our practices and processes to make sure LawRight is right for all: our clients, our members and partners and our communities
- Our new name provides the impetus to raise awareness of our services to increase funding, grants, sponsorships and bequests, so we can help more people
- We will continue to work collaboratively with our members and partners to ensure our combined efforts are having the greatest impact on resolving the legal needs of vulnerable and disadvantaged Queenslanders.
